RODERICK THEATER.

Large audiences were present to see the fine bill for the first three days of this week at the Roderick Monday. The Artist's Model's Jealou'y is an unusually strong dramatic film, portraying a deep love story and a tragic end. A most funny film is the Non-Stop Motor Cycle. Mr. Henpeck's Adventure With a Burgiar is a big comic picture. There are several other beautiful distributed by the strong and well worth see picture. There are several other beautiful films shown and well worth seeing, one being a scenic roll of Sicily. Miss Hefferman sang The Kerry Pance in a delightful manner, while Arthur Dudley's song was a treat to all. The slides are very beautiful with this song. HOW TO MAKE SALADS.

Lobster Salad.

Lobster Saisd.

Put a lobster in boiling water slightly saited and let boil rapidly for 20 minutes. When done it will be a bright red color and should be removed. When cold crack the claws and twist off head; split body lengthwise. Pick out the meat in bits, saving the coral separate. Cover dish with lettuce, mix one-half pint of mayonnaise and lobster together and place on lettuce. Mash the coral fine and sprinkle it over the whole. Garnish with white of hard-boiled eggs cut in rings. Cut a few small cucumber pickles lengthwise in ten pieces and pass through these rings.

Dressing: Yolk of one hard-boiled egg mashed smooth. Add one raw yolk; beat well together, then add slowly three tablespoonful of anastard
mixed in a tablespoonful of mastard
mixed in a tablespoonful of vinegar.
Pepper and sait to taste. Stir slowly until it thickens to a jelly. Then and linough cream to make the quantity keeded.

German Potato Salad.

Select one fine head of lettuce, or off the root and and reject all green and decayed leaves; pick over and wash carefully, lay in ice-cold water four hours to become crisp. Then arrange the lettuce leaves in a large halad dish, filling the center with the following dressing: Choose small polatoes—imported ones are best but new potatoes will do if carefully cooked and well drained. Pest them and yet aside to cool while making dressing. Cut one-quarter, pound of fat bacon into smallest possible dice, put hem into a frying pan over a slow off the root and and reject all ar hem into smallest possible dice, out hem into a frying pan over a slow fre. Shred an onion into a large bowl, add a small tablespoonful of sait, one cup of vinegar and hot water (half and half). When the fat is a light brown color and dice well criaped, and two tablespoons of salad oil and pour it into the vinegar and onion, turning in slowly at first, lest it spatter. Since the pointoes as thin as possible, silein slowly at first, lest it spatter. Siles the potatoes as thin as possible, stirring often. If the salad is too dry, add a little hot water from time to time. It should have a glossy look, without being either lumpy or greasy. If it looks good, it is pretty sure to taste good. Best eaten as soon as made.

Chicken Saled.

Boil the fowls tender and remove all the gristle and skin; mince in small pieces, but do not chop. To each chicken put twice its weight in celery cut in small pieces; mix thoroughly and set in cool place. In the mean-time prepare a dressing of the yelks of four raw eggs and two hoiled ones. Rub these as smooth as possible, and is always found on tablespoonful of oil to each yolk. Mix thoroughly and put in two teaspoonfuls of dry salt, one of pepper and one of mustard. When ready for the table pour this dressing over chicken and mix thoroughly. Se HOME GARMENT MAKING.

Of one Cornelius Malone.
Who was my father's friend.

"Oho!" remarked the ancient one,
"So you're ould Peter Dooley's son,
Mayhap 'lis you're the likely lad,
But troth, you'll niver be
The man your father was, Bedad!"
He says, says he.

The store had but a middling trade
When left to me by Pup.
But now it's growing, and I've made Additions to the shop.
Yet each progressive step I've shown
I now must needs defend Against the tongue of old Malone,
Who was my father's friend.

"So thrade is purty good wid you?

Ab, well," says he, "I hope, 'tis thrue;
I pray it still may grow an' theles,
But, faix, 'twill niver be
Like whin your father was alive,
Bedad!" says he,

THE SPUR.

Wharever man may be and rove.
For desert plain, by shady grove.
Through mountain deflie where, but if the property pause to look the beetling cliff leems leaning outward to a fall that shall obliterate them all.
Where the bald engles circling scream thout the crags, and where the gleam of particles attracts the eye, and makes men turn aside to try f the old mountain, hard and cold, an be made loose its clutching held in the red gold if they but sir n wake of the sun-glinted lure sefore them.

Where there is no trail
Oer the wide sens, but what the whale
And shark in pursuit of their prey.
Or the swift vessell day by day
Make on their way from shore to shore:
Tis made, wiped out and is no more.
The winds obliterate the trail;
While yet one glances o'er the rail;
The shark o'ertakes its frightened prey.
The whale the ship go on their way.
But where'er man has crossed the foam
Has been a thought of home, sweet home.

Wherever that the April breeze
Has stirred high granges to the kneez,
Wherever that the deart sand
Has shown a human footprint, and
Wherever steam or belled sail
Has driven ships along the trail
From west to east, from east to west,
Where'er the traveler stops to rest,
By Afric grove, Andean peak—Wheraver the prospectors seek
The yellow gold they kope to heap
In someone's lap, they sink to sleep
On April nights and in the gloam.
They stir and murmur, "Home, sweet,
home!"

"Home, home, sweet home!" Its splen-did thrail!
Drives us and leads us! Over all
That man has won or hopes to win
He sees the ingle where his kin
Shall gather round when comes the While he shall tell of fight and flight, And thirst and hungriness and wreck—Then an arm shall fall round his neck, And "Papa" take" a babe shall call, And he shall laugh, "Twas worth is
